II SYNOPSIS

THE STORY

One debt. One lost son. One mission beyond the edge of the known universe, for the very enemy that took everything from him.

KHARMA is a sci-fi opera where Star Wars meets Game of Thrones. In a distant future, humanity has discovered that it is not alone. Alien civilizations, ancient races and artificial intelligences coexist in a complex galaxy, where space exploration has opened up new opportunities... and new conflicts. In this fragile balance, knowledge of the universe is intertwined with mysterious cosmic energies, capable of interacting with space and time.

The exploration of unknown worlds is controlled by Discovery Interstellar Planet (DIP), but the best licenses are reserved for rich and noble elites who rarely undertake missions themselves, subcontracting the risks to low-level operators. It is in this world that we find Captain Biceky: a veteran space explorer, holder of a last-degree DIP license, crushed by debt and carrying a wound that never healed. His son was taken from him during a planetary attack years ago, and never found.

The story begins in the shadows of KHARMA, the capital planet of the known universe. The Twins, reptilian alien loan sharks originally from Kenter who now operate out of KHARMA, are looking for Biceky. He owes them everything. They find him where they always find him: at the casino, losing again. But instead of collecting the debt, they deliver him somewhere unexpected: the House of Vulsar.

Racheta, the iron-handed patriarch of the most powerful dynasty in the known universe, makes the Captain an offer that cannot be refused. His debt: erased. His DIP license: renewed. And something far more valuable: news of his missing son. In exchange, Biceky must travel beyond the Ereb Line, a region past the edge of the known universe that no chart has ever mapped, and bring back whatever he finds there. No questions asked.

THE LAST HAND CASINO DISTRICT

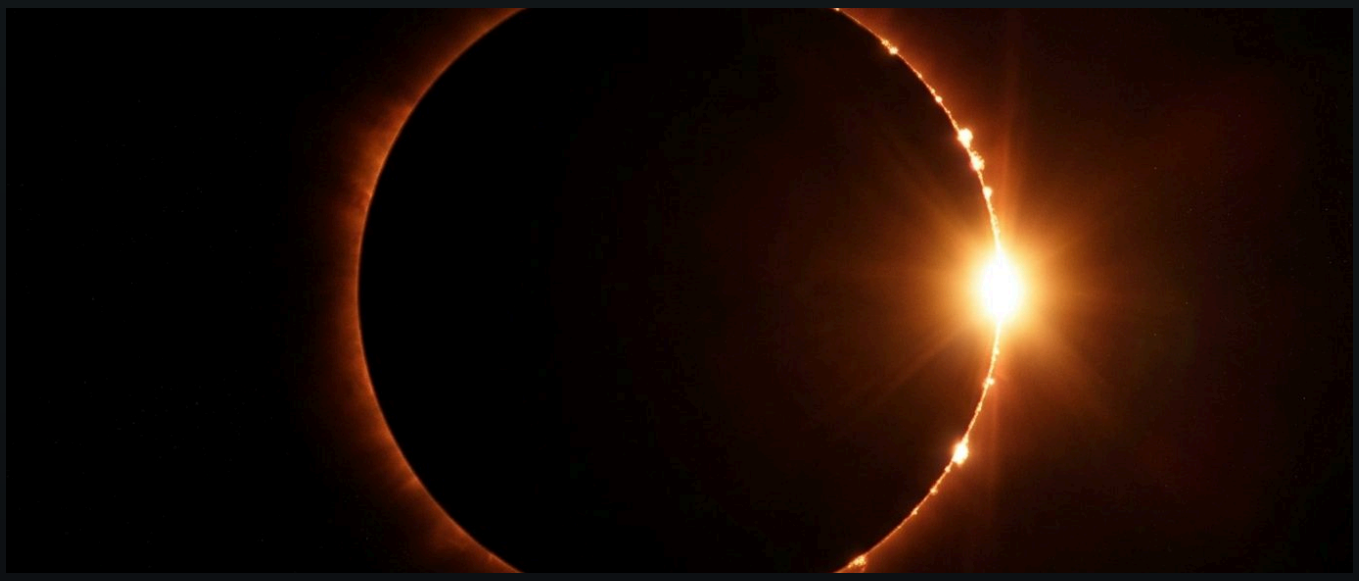

CAPTAIN BICEKY

The Captain has no choice. He never did. Together with Jack, his pilot, irreverent and fearless, he sets course for Planet DIP-X14, an uncharted frozen world at the edge of everything. What they find beneath the ice changes everything: a gigantic pyramid structure belonging to an unknown civilization, older than any recorded in history.

But they are not alone. The Manhunters, Alpha and Omega, lethal cybernetic hunters who answer to no one, have arrived on the same frozen world, drawn by the same coordinates. During a total eclipse, a portal opens in the ice. From beyond the known universe emerges a Sunwalker: an enigmatic entity, bearer of secrets linked to the cosmic energies that govern space and time.

What follows is a race against time across the frozen surface of DIP-X14. Jack manages to seize the Sunwalker's containment capsule before the Manhunters can secure it. He escapes across the frozen lake under a raging blizzard while Alpha and Omega cut down everything in their path. The Captain, waiting aboard the ship, hears Jack's voice crackle through the comms, and gives the only order that matters: received.

The retrieval of the Sunwalker will set in motion a chain of events destined to intertwine alien races, ancient powers, corporate guilds and artificial intelligences, in a universe where science, spirituality and power collide. For the Captain, the mission is only the beginning. Somewhere out there, beyond the Ereb Line, his son is still waiting.

IV DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

DIRECTION FIRST, TECHNOLOGY SECOND

KHARMA is the opening chapter of a universe I have been building for a long time. For years the tools to make it real did not exist at a scale an independent filmmaker could reach. Now they do.

But KHARMA is not a film made by a machine. It is a directed film. Every shot started on the page: script, shot list, framing, lens, blocking and performance, written as a director's brief before a single frame was generated. AI was the crew that executed that brief: the set builders, the visual effects department, the cameras I could never have afforded. Every choice stayed mine.

The tone I aimed for is serious, layered and human, closer to Andor than to spectacle. A universe where no one is purely good or purely evil, where power is quiet and ruthless, and where the most important story is always a personal one. A father looking for his son. Everything else, the politics, the factions, the cosmic energies, is the world he has to survive to get there.

This film is the beginning. The universe is already built.

VII THE DIRECTOR

MARCELLO L. RASO · DIRECTOR & SCREENWRITER

Marcello L. Raso is an award-winning Italian director and screenwriter and the creator of the KHARMA universe. He writes and directs character-driven stories set in worlds built to last beyond a single film.

With KHARMA he became the first Italian to win a film festival award in South Korea with a sci-fi film made using AI. He first reached a global audience with Predator Origins, a fan series that passed 100 million combined views on TikTok and YouTube.

He trained at the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia in Rome, in directing, actor direction, cinematography, screenwriting and production. Every film he makes starts with traditional direction; AI comes after. He is an Official Creative Partner of Seedance, CapCut, Runway, Hailuo, OpenArt and YouArt, and a Shaike Certified Creator.
